

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

5        This invention relates to an electronic device including a lock switch which defines activation permission of the power supply of the electronic device, and a unit which receives an activation instruction from software and invalidates the received activation instruction when the lock switch permits activation.